We're getting more and more edback about insecticides on bacco, particulary from the sporters. Growers will want to especially careful this season in the way they manage the se of chemicals. There is a od chance that fields will be ot-checked for rate and kinds f insecticides being used.

Now here's a new slant! If ou used Di-Syston in the field ast before transplanting your nly insect concern should be orms. For several years one f the materials on the recomended list was Bacillus thurgiensis. This material is vailable as a wettable powder r liquid and is applied after orms appear but before they re one-half inch long. The kill s usually not instantaneous but ills over a two to three day eriod. We are told that once he worms eat this fungus they liscontinue eating tobacco but hey may remain alive for several days.

We plan for at least one testemonstration using Bacillus olds: Biotrol XK, Dipel and Thuricide.

* * *

By the way Bacillus Thuringensis is the most effective material that we can recommend for Loopers and worms on abbage, broccoli, cauliflower, and brussels sprouts.

* * *

Last week we were able to get seven Dekalb Grain Sorghum varieties planted on the farm of E. W. & Dan Carson. Varieties inthis planting are: F-64, C-42A, BR-64, BR-44, C-424, E-57 and F-61A.

After these varieties head out you'll be invited to take a look at them.

* * *

Last week we had an opportunity to use the small grain growing at the VCIA Seed Farm in Amelia. There will be Bluebuoy II available this fall, but the only advantage that I see is that it carries resistance to rust which is usually not a big problem in this area.

Then there was Arthur and Arthur 71. They both look good and have hession fly resistance.

We were told that its now been determined that there are several varieties of hession fly. This could cause a problem.

The new Windsor Oat continues to look very good.

Set-Aside Acreage Provisions Discussed

Some principal requirements in set-aside acreage provisions of the 1972 farm programs have been outlined by a local farm program official in response to continuing questions from farmers.

The 537 farmers in Appomattox County signed up in the feed grain and wheat programs have a vital interest in knowing and complying with set-aside rules in order to earn full farm program payments, according to J. P. Alvis, Jr., Chariman of the Appomattox County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee.

Purpose of set-aside in the feed grain and wheat programs under the 3-year Agricultural Act of 1970 is to help reduce the potential American agriculture has for excess crop production. Farmers in the set-aside programs give up the use of some of their productive acres in order to help achieve an effective balance between supply and demand.

For that reason, farmers are asked to select land for set-aside that has the same average productivity as the program cropland on the farm. Farm payments may be reduced or lost if the average productivity provision is not followed.

Set-aside land must be designated and certified by June 30, 1972. That means producers must come in to the ASCS county office by that date to give the location of their set-aside land and certify they are in compliance with all set-aside provisions.

Producers are cautioned that no changes are allowed after they have certified compliance. "A farmer certifies that he has set-aside the acreage and has complied and will continue to comply with set-aside rules." Mr. Alvis said. After set-aside is designated and certified by a producer, his farm may be spot-checked at any time for compliance. If the farm is not in compliance, the producer may lose some or all of his program payment.
